Creator God Rules The Universe Because Hawking Built The Big Bang On A Foundation Of Quicksand ROBERT GENTRY, The Orion Foundation — Hawking is the world's premier big bang cosmologist; his compatriots, vast in number, have repeatedly checked all he ever wrote. They would have discovered it earlier if he had blundered even slightly. Thus it's impossible that he built the big bang on a foundation of quicksand. So the final verdict must be that Hawking is the winner and the God of Genesis is the loser. Despite this cosmological unanimity, we will show that Hawking and all his compatriots are guilty of that blunder and hence are now destined to collectively reap the consequences of having made it. And further that neither they nor their many followers will understand this blunder until learning of it in our presentation. Only then will they realize that Hawking and others did build the big bang on a false gravitational redshift foundation, one that in one crucial respect so closely imitates the physics of the actual gravitational redshift that neither Hawking – nor any of the millions of his followers – ever suspected they were all being flummoxed into accepting the greatest scientific debacle of all time. Our presentation reveals how this false foundational assumption of in-flight wavelength expansion was identified, and why its discovery led to big bang's disproof and conclusion that God rules the Universe.
