Stopping supersonic beams with atomic and molecular coilguns
EDVARDAS NAREVICIUS, University of Texas at Austin

We report a method that enables the stopping and trapping of any paramagnetic atom or molecule using a series of pulsed electromagnetic coils. Results of stopping metastable neon and molecular oxygen with a 64 stage coilgun will be presented and applications to fundamental problems in physics and chemistry discussed.