A new NOYCE teacher preparation program at Randolph-Macon College: Training physics teachers at a liberal arts institution¹ RACHELE DOMINGUEZ, DIANA YESBECK, APRIL MARCHETTI, TRACI STEVENS, Randolph-Macon College — The new Randolph-Macon Noyce Teacher-Scholar Program (funded by NSF) prepares students for a career teaching chemistry, biology, or physics at the secondary level. Focusing on the challenges and advantages for physics teacher preparation at a four-year liberal arts institution, we introduce the program's collaborative training across these fields in conjunction with the Education department.
